KPISS is freeform internet radio, built and run by a thriving global community of live DJs.

Established in 2015, by indie promoter Canadian/New Yorker DJ Sheri Barclay, KPISS has streamed from from a shipping container, a Brooklyn pizza shop window and a sexy 70's RV. Now broadcast from the anonymous addresses of audio aesthetes across the map – KPISS showers listeners with sounds spanning the ironic to the iconic, seven days a week. The on-air selectors are the finest group of creative misfits, extreme crate diggers and sophisticated music nerds ever assembled. Tune in to chat live, uncover lost gems and discover future favorites. KPISS is the first and only internet radio station supporting artists and labels directly via Bandcamp. Ad-free, eclectic, uncompromising and forever weird. The AM radio of the internet: KPISS.FM –The Golden Stream.

KPISS is generously funded through the support of our DJ community and fans. Love KPISS? Prove it (for cheap!) and get a membership pin by joining our Patreon at <https://www.patreon.com/kpissradio>

We love our PissinRs and thank you for making this the best internet radio station on the Digiwaves.

OUR COMMUNITY

In January 2022, streaming giant Spotify made headlines when Neil Young removed his music from the platform that continues to host Joe Rogan’s podcast which, the legendary Canadian musician argues, promotes misinformation. Several artists followed his lead and, just like any time there is a great tech reckoning, consumers pondered how best to consume audio content. The controversy around Spotify’s financial support of Rogan also reinvigorated the conversation around how little money independent artists receive from giant streaming platforms.

It’s moments like these when alternative platforms like Sheri Barclay’s KPISS internet radio station shine. Following Young’s departure, Barclay says that there was an increase in the number of artists reaching out to KPISS, saying they wanted to pull their content from Spotify and were looking for alternative venues. KPISS’ strength is that it has been built around supporting, and support from, both artists and listeners. KPISS isn’t trying to compete with Spotify, Apple Music, or Tidal — it’s trying to offer a better way to support independent artists, a more curated listening experience and a way for consumers to discover new music.

“The sheer amount of curated music and our content, platform and culture speak for themselves,” Barclay says. “We’re pushing the needle and promoting new music and music discovery and trying to not contribute to the Spotify streaming wars and all of this icky stuff going on in the world as we all are about to get swallowed up by the metaverse.”
